A cell (Cell) is one electrochemical unit (with one positive and one negative electrode), enclosed in a protective shell.

A battery (Battery) is a block of two or more cells or accumulators, united into an electrical chain.

The power capacity of lithium-ion batteries in Watt-hours (Watt-hour rating) is a multiple of battery voltage in volts (V) and capacity in Ampere/Hours, (Ah). In other words, $Wh = V \times Ah$.
